This Portable Mouse is Flat-Out Unusual

Posted by Harry McCracken

My fingers, I'm happy to say, have always had the ability to adjust on the fly for whatever input devices I'm using. So I've never carried a mouse with my notebook. But I know plenty of people who hate touchpads with a passion and want a real mouse with 'em at all times. And the MoGo Mouse, unveiled here at CES, caters to their needs in a way that's certainly imaginative.

Rather than taking up room in a briefcase, the MoGo fits in a notebook's PC Card slot, drawing power from the slot to recharge itself. It's a Bluetooth model, so--assuming that your notebook is suitably equipped--there's no tranceiver needed.

Pop it out, and you can flip out a kickstand that gives it a bit of height. It remains a very small, flat mouse, not much bigger than a credit card. But it seemed to work reasonably well when I gave it a quick try.

The MoGo is $70, and will be available in March.

Great idea -- now make it $25 and I'll buy one.
